TOURING THE EAST

Large and Enthusiastic Crowds Gather to Hear

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Discuss the Campaign Issues in Cumberland, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Hon. William Jennings Bryan, the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, has completed a triumphal tour of the East. At every meeting addressed by him large and enthusiastic crowds greeted him with hearty applause.

He arrived in Cumberland from Wheeling, W. Va., early Saturday morning. Hundreds of people had gathered about the hotel prior to the arrival of his train to greet the distinguished Nebraskan and they gave him a royal reception. He was called upon by many distinguished politicians from Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia during the forenoon, among them being some who opposed him in his former campaigns but who are now warm supporters of him and his policies.

At 2:30 o'clock Mr. Bryan was escorted to a platform overlooking the plaza where he was greeted by a tremendous crowd who stood in the sun and listened to his discussion of political issues. In this crowd were several hundred from this county who went to Cumberland especially to hear and see the Peerless Leader.

In his remarks before presenting Mr. Bryan Gen. Joseph Sprigg assured the candidate that he would receive the electoral vote of Maryland.

In Mr. Bryan's speech he advocated the establishing of a department of labor in the President's cabinet, discussed the trust question, demanding regulation and condemning monopolies. He advocated the enactment of laws that would guarantee to depositors in banks the return of their money, dollar for dollar, in case of bank failures, his plan being to tax banks a fraction of one per cent. on deposits and thus create a fund out of which the obligations of a defunct bank could be paid. He pointed in this connection to the working of the plan in Oklahoma and to the fact that Kansas wants such a law so as to keep depositors from placing their money in Oklahoma banks because they are considered more secure.

In his evening address at the Academy of Music Mr. Bryan compared the two platforms, denounced the Republican leaders for not agreeing to make public before election the campaign contributions, advocated the election of Senators by popular vote, discussed government by injunctions, the relation of employer and employee, the question of taxation and the guaranteeing of bank deposits.

In Baltimore Twenty-five thousand people cheered Mr. Bryan in Baltimore where it was hoped by his enemies he would receive no ovation.

When Mr. Bryan rose to speak there was not an inch of vacant space in the vast hall. The scene was one that might have been presented in the interior of Madison Square Garden, New York. The floor space of the armory is greater than that of New York's famous auditorium, and the gathering was made spectacular by the waving of thousands of flags. His address dealt with the campaign issues in general and was listened to with marked attention and frequently interrupted by applause.

On his way from Baltimore to Philadelphia Mr. Bryan, having read Mr. Taft's remarks concerning his past record, dictated the following:

Bryan's Record
Mr. Taft is dodging. Instead of defining his position on public questions, he is inquiring about my record, and in his inquiry he shows that he knows as little about my record as he does about the public questions which he has attempted to discuss. He accuses me of being changeable and of abandoning issues. Let me refer to the questions which I have been discussing:

First—I began with the tariff question twenty-eight years ago and I have been a tariff reformer all these years. Mr. Taft is just beginning to see the necessity for tariff reform.

Second—The election of Senators by the people. I began advocating it as early as 1890 and I have been advocating it ever since. In his notification speech he announces that he is personally inclined to this. This, so far as I know, is his first intimation in favor of this reform and he makes it eighteen years after I began to work for it.

Advocates Income Tax
Third—The income tax: I helped to draw the income tax law in 1894

Benjamin G. Reighard
Saturday night, September 12, Benjamin G. Reighard, one of Rainsburg's most esteemed citizens, entered into rest, succumbing to the ravages of typhoid fever, with which he had been ill for over five weeks. During the last week he was also afflicted with hiccoughs, which greatly aggravated his condition. His age was 37 years, 11 months and 25 days.

Mr. Reighard's parents were Abram and Caroline Reighard and he was born in Bedford Township near Imbertown on October 17, 1870. In early life he taught several terms in the schools of the township and later was principal of the Rainsburg schools. He began merchandising at the latter place and continued until the end of his life. On December 29, 1898, deceased was married to Miss Carrie May Diehl, daughter of Nevin Diehl, and this union was blessed with three children, who survive: Caroline Beatrice, Walter Randolph, and Lawrence Diehl; these are all young and the widowed mother, who is now ill with fever, has the sympathy of all.

The following brothers and sisters also survive: Job, living in Iowa, Wayne, Charles, Fred, Albert and Francis, and Mrs. Sue Zimmers, Mrs. Henrietta Dively, and Mrs. Carrie Holderbaum, all of Bedford Township. The funeral services were held at the late residence Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. B. F. Bausman, assisted by Rev. Charles E. Rupp. Interment at Pleasant Hill Reformed Cemetery, Imbertown.

Mr. Reighard was a member of the Reformed church and was a person of sterling worth. He took great interest in his home and community; that he was held in high regard was proved by the large concourse of people at his funeral and by the beautiful floral tributes sent. He was secretary of the Rainsburg School Board and tax collector of the borough. In politics he was a life-long Democrat.

His numerous inventions of new and cheap processes of manufacturing iron and steel marked a new epoch in those industries. He also invented the only successful process of making Portland cement from furnace slag. He has been called the father of applied science in the manufacture of iron and steel. Owing to ill health he retired from business 18 months ago and came to Bedford to live.

MORE IMPROVEMENTS

Being Made by Fair Association—Help it Along.

The Fair of 1908 now promises to be better than even the new management thought. The appearance of the grounds is a surprise to everybody. During the past week all fences have been whitewashed and some of the buildings repainted. The track is now being put in first-class condition and in another week the grounds and new buildings will all be in readiness for the best Fair the people of Bedford County have ever had the opportunity to attend.

The premium books have been sent out during the past week and all persons not receiving one can secure a copy by asking the secretary of the association. Obtain a copy, look over the premium list and see if you do not have some article that you can bring to the Fair, and thus do your share towards making it a success.

The management report that they expect large exhibits in all departments. The fruit display should be large as Bedford County is surely one of the largest and best fruit growing counties in the state. The races will be better than expected as entries are being received and all races on the program will be filled.

The baseball games—for the championship of Bedford County—will be played as follows: Wednesday, Hyndman vs. Riddlesburg; Thursday, Coal Dale vs. Saxton; Friday, the winners of Wednesday's and Thursday's games for a purse of $150.

HAWKING MACHINES

Catarrh Sufferers are Nothing But Hawking, Spitting and Blowing Machines, Says an Authority.

Is it possible that in these days when cleanliness and sanitary reform is being preached in the churches, schools and at public gatherings, that thousands of people will continue to suffer from catarrh, when there is an absolutely certain remedy always on hand?

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is a pleasant, medicated and antiseptic air. Breathe it in and it will cure catarrh. It will stop foul breath, watery eyes, and crusts in the nose, in a few days.

It is guaranteed by F. W. Jordan to do it or money back, and such a guarantee ought to be strong enough for anybody.

Entirely Cured by Hyomei. Having suffered from catarrh for about two years, and having tried numerous remedies without any satisfactory results, I finally tried Hyomei, and am glad to state that after using about one and one-half bottles I am entirely cured. I have recommended it to others with satisfactory results.

—C. N. Lindsey, 407 East First Ave., Mitchell, S. D.

A complete Hyomei outfit, consisting of a strong, hard rubber pocket inhaler and a bottle of Hyomei, costs only $1, and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost only 50 cents each at F. W. Jordan's or direct, by mail, charges prepaid, from Booth's Hyomei Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Hyomei also cures Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Croup of infants, and any inflammatory disease of the respiratory tract.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of

Fashions in Fall Fabrics

Novelty is the key-note to all departments of fashion this fall. It is interesting to note its prevalence in the many new materials. A few stripes, diagonal weaves and borders are shown as types of the latest novelties. Stripes are very conspicuous in both the two-color and monotone effects, the latter being newer, and usually realized by the uniting of contrasting weaves. Diagonal effects in serge and cheviot are especially smart for severe tailored suits. Borders are much in evidence, many being arranged in graduated widths, suitable for cutting apart and using as trimming on various parts of the costume. This is far more practical than the type of border which must be used on the edge of the straight breadth.

Braids are the choice par excellence among the fashionable trimmings, the silk or wool soutache being the most popular. Fancy braids are to be seen in every style and variety.—The October New Idea Woman's Magazine.

Between Duty ... And Love.

(Original.)

Safa Arkadyevna, a little Russian peasant girl, heard sleigh bells and went to the door. A sledge drove up, and a young man alighted and, followed by his valet, hurried into the house. The driver remained with the horses.

"Is there any one here who knows the road to V.?" he asked.

"There is no one here at all except my father and myself. My father is ill in bed. I know the road to V."

"I must get there in time to catch the St. Petersburg express which passes at 10:15. It is now 8. The distance is—"

"Eighteen versts."

"No more than that? Good. There is plenty of time."

"But, excellency, there are many hills, and the snow is deep and in places drifted. You will require all the time you have, and more."

The young man's countenance fell.

"My horses are tired out," he said, "and my sledge is heavy, yet I must catch the train."

"We have a fresh horse and a light sledge with seats for but two people. Let your driver and your servant remain here. I will drive you to V."

"You little angel! You little beauty! Take me to V. in time for the train and I will love you forever."

He impulsively threw his arms around Safa and kissed her.

It is astonishing how speedily a very young country girl—and this one was but seventeen—who has never seen a fine gentleman when she first meets one can fall in love with him. For that one moment, for the first time in her life, Safa was in heaven.

The travelers' sledge was driven into the barn, the lighter sledge got out, and Safa Arkadyevna and Alexis Alexandrovitch entered. She holding the reins, the robes were adjusted, and they drove away.

"Why do you so wish to catch the train?" asked Safa.

"It is a matter of life and death."

"Your life or death?" asked the girl, with a gasp.

"No; that of a man on the train."

Safa listened intently for more. Had this to do with revolutionary work? She was an enthusiastic revolutionist. Was she driving this man to the train to enable him to prevent the accomplishment of a revolutionary purpose?

The hills lay within the first ten or a dozen versts of the distance to be traveled. When Alexis became impatient at their slow progress Safa told him that for the last six or eight versts the road lay over level ground. When they had passed the hills they had but half an hour to go the remainder of the distance. But the road was covered with loose snow, and the horse was not as fresh as at starting. To their right they could see to a considerable distance, and two or three versts away was a sledge, the driver of which was whipping his horse unmercifully, going in the same direction as themselves.

"There they are now!"

"Who?" asked Safa.

"The murderers! Get up! Give him the whip!"

"Not until you tell me what this means," she said firmly.

Alexis turned and looked at her, astonished. After a few moments of study he said:

"The minister of the interior is on the train I wish to catch. At an inn where I stayed last night I overheard a conversation that told me a revolutionist would board the train at V., leave his compartment while the train is in motion, walk along the foot-board to the carriage occupied by the minister, shoot him through the window and jump from the train."

He watched eagerly the girl's face as he spoke. She made no comment for a time, though she showed traces of an inward struggle, a struggle between love and duty. She knew of the sufferings of her people under autocratic rule, yet her heart had sprung to this young man as a moth will dash against the glass enclosing an electric light. She could take him to the station in time to save the minister's life or could delay him.

"Well?" he ventured presently.

The girl made no reply. They were going at a good pace, and Alexis, knowing that she was deliberating, preferred to give her a few moments in which to decide. If her decision was against him he would take the reins himself.

But he did not know the way, and this might wreck his purpose. Suddenly she threw the reins to him.

Seizing them in one hand, he laid on the whip with the other. The girl sat mute by his side. Entering a wood, they came to a fork in the road.

"Which?" asked Alexis.

Safa remained silent.

Seeing that she would not choose for him and realizing the impossibility of forcing her to do so, he chose the left hand road. It led him two versts out of his way. When he emerged from the wood he could again see a long distance. There was the train approaching the station. There was the sledge containing the assassins within a few hundred yards of their goal.

Alexis drove on to the station, reaching it some ten minutes after the train had passed. He sent his information by telegraph to the next stopping place, but the train did not stop for more than half an hour, and by that time it was too late. The minister had been assassinated.

Alexis Alexandrovitch told no one how he had been delayed by the little peasant girl, who preferred her duty to her newborn love. The incident made her a revolutionary worker, and she is now in Siberia.

The Farmers Right In It.

A "CORNER IN BRAINS." Benefits Everybody Interested in Agriculture.

Big Crops and High Prices Not the Only Blessings Awaiting the Tiller of the Soil.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 2, 1908.—(Special.)—Good crops and good prices are not the only good things that the farmers have coming to them this year.

Those who are fortunate enough to be regular readers of THE NATIONAL STOCKMAN AND FARMER, published here in Pittsburgh, will be delighted to learn of the news that was sprung here in newspaper circles yesterday, that the publishers of The Stockman had secured the entire and exclusive services of Dr. W. I. Chamberlain, of Ohio, and hereafter he will be enrolled on the staff of this enterprising journal as Associate Editor.

This bit of news will surprise and please the farmers who read The Stockman regularly, and about every good one in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and adjacent States, does read it, more than it did the newspaper men of Pittsburgh. It was already known that this farm paper had the best editorial force of any paper of its class in the world, including such forceful and practical writers as Alva Agee, L. W. Lighty, W. D. Zinn, Dr. C. D. Smead, W. W. Foote, the great market specialist, and a long list of others of the same caliber.

In fact it has been the policy of The Stockman always to buy the best brains that could be found, regardless of cost, and when the opportunity was offered to secure the exclusive services of such an eminent educator along agricultural lines as Dr. W. I. Chamberlain, of Ohio, no time was lost in closing the deal.

Dr. Chamberlain's work begins with the first issue of The Stockman in September and hereafter all who want to read his articles or secure his valuable advice in answers to questions, etc., can reach him through that journal only. With his experience as a man of affairs, as a scholar and an educator, as an editorial writer, and, most of all, as a practical farmer, the Doctor has no superiors and few equals, and his connection with The Stockman staff certainly gives that paper a "Corner in Brains" in agricultural journalism, and establishes the fact more clearly that it is, as its friends all call it, "The world's greatest farm and home paper."

Another surprise to other publishers here in Pittsburgh is the matter of the price of The Stockman. Just how such a staff of Editors and special writers can be maintained and a paper of 24 to 40 pages put out 52 times a year for one dollar is hard to understand by others in the same line of business.

And when, a few days ago, the announcement was made that the paper would be sent to any one, anywhere, at any time, for 10 weeks for 10 cents, the climax in low prices for a high priced article was certainly reached. Thousands are availing themselves of this easy way of getting acquainted with this great farm and home journal and all who do not go and do likewise are certainly missing the opportunity of their lives in getting next to a good thing.

Harvesting the Oyster

At the end of three years of vigilant care the oyster is generally large enough for consumption. The harvesting of the oyster, which commences in early September and continues throughout what is known as the oyster season, is probably the most picturesque side of the industry.

There are two chief methods of gathering oysters, dredging and tonging. On the natural grounds the latter process is employed almost exclusively, the reason being that most of the states have declared dredging illegal on the ground that dredges work irreparable damage to the beds.

Tonging consists in the gathering of oysters by means of two long rakes, joined scissor-like at the center. These are known as tongs, and are sometimes more than fifteen feet in length. Tonging is generally pursued in small boats, each carrying a crew of two—the tonger and a man or boy to cull. The tongers, generally speaking, do not market their own oysters, but sell them day by day, and directly from their boats, to one or other of the "buy boats," craft employed by the oyster packers and shippers exclusively for this purpose.

Lesson XII.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 20, 1908.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text, I Sam. v, 12—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.)

LESSON I.—Israel asks for a king (I Sam. viii, 10-22). Golden Text, Prov. viii, 15, "By Me kings reign and princes decree justice." The whole quarter has kept us face to face with Israel, for the most part in rebellion against God. In this first lesson they deliberately and persistently reject Him and demand to be given a king like other nations. When He came in the form of man, as their Messiah, they rejected Him, saying we have no king but Caesar, and thus they do still.

LESSON II.—Saul chosen king (I Sam. x, 17-27). Golden Text II Sam. xxiii, 3, "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." It seems an awful thing that men should turn from the only living and true God to put their trust in one of themselves, but they did worse than this and made a golden calf and said, "These be thy gods, O Israel." When they had to choose between the Son of God, their Messiah, and a murderer they chose the murderer, and they will yet choose the wickedest of men as their rulers.

LESSON III.—Samuel warns Saul and the people (I Sam. xii, 1-5, 13-25). Golden Text, I Sam. xii, 24, "Only fear the Lord and serve Him in truth with all your heart, for consider how great things He hath done for you." God having indulged them with a man after their own heart, a tall, fine looking man, a head and shoulders above other men, Samuel earnestly entreats them to fear and serve and obey the Lord, who has dealt so graciously with them, that He may still bless them, if possible, notwithstanding their great sin.

LESSON IV.—Saul rejected by the Lord (I Sam. xiv, 13-28). Golden Text, Josh. xxiv, 24, "The Lord our God will serve, and His voice will we obey." Saul did not continue as little in his own sight (verse 17) as before he became king, but had his own thoughts about things, did what he thought best and yet insisted that he had obeyed the Lord.

LESSON V.—David anointed at Bethlehem (I Sam. xvi, 1-13). Golden Text, I Sam. xvi, 7, "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." It is our weakness to consider a fine appearance, something to fascinate the eye or the ear or the intellect, but God considers above all things the heart, for out of it are the issues of life—not the eldest nor the most attractive, but the youngest and to men the most unlikely.

LESSON VI.—David and Goliath (I Sam. xvii, 33-40). Golden Text, Ps. xi, 1, "In the Lord put I my trust." A magnificent illustration of the strength that is made perfect in weakness, of the Lord showing Himself strong on behalf of those whose hearts are whole toward Him! The great mass of flesh and blood, with all its strength and armor, falls before a stripling with a sling and stone. Pride and self confidence fall before confidence in God.

LESSON VII.—Saul tries to kill David (I Sam. xviii, 6-16). Golden Text, Ps. lxxviii, 11, "The Lord God is a sun and shield." The flesh cannot tolerate the Spirit, for the flesh is controlled by an evil spirit of jealousy, hatred, pride, strife and such like. The same spirit that in Cain slew his brother Abel is in Saul seeking to kill David, and so it always has been, is and will be. "The carnal mind is enmity against God."

LESSON VIII.—Friendship of David and Jonathan (I Sam. xx, 30-42). Golden Text, Prov. xvii, 17, "A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity." Such love as these two had, the one for the other, is something heavenly, but what can we say of the love of God to sinners? Nothing was ever seen on earth like it. The love of God in Christ Jesus to us sinners is certainly the greatest topic in Scripture, the greatest thing truly.

LESSON IX.—David spares Saul's life (I Sam. xxvi, 17-25). Golden Text, Luke vi, 27, "Love your enemies; do good to them which hate you." There is neither murder nor hatred nor revenge in the heart of David. He would not lay a finger on his enemy to harm him even when he had him in his power. This was the Spirit of God, the Spirit of Him who said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." He truly committed himself to God.

LESSON X.—Saul and Jonathan slain in battle (I Sam. xxxi). Golden Text, Amos iv, 12, "Prepare to meet thy God." As David said when urged one day to kill him, "His time will come," and it did, but David was guiltless. God has a "thus far" for all His enemies, and beyond that they cannot go. There is a fullness of time of blessing upon His own and judgment for His adversaries. The sad part is to see such as Jonathan cut off. But for such "to die is gain."

LESSON XI.—David made king over Judah and Israel (II Sam. ii, 1-7; v, 1-5). Golden Text, II Sam. v, 10, "David went on and grew great, and the Lord God of Hosts was with him" happy consummation to the quarter's lessons, and as we consider if we are carried on to the great consummation when the Son of David shall sit on David's throne and shall reign in righteousness over all Israel and all nations, and there shall be neither adversary nor evil occurrent, and the nations shall learn war no more.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and to publish a broad, open, and to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his confidence. Thus he has removed his medicines from among the nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny. Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, and liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different classes of practice, and the very most one extracted from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and enclosing the name. From this book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents, and that they are made from active, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Sagaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable active medicinal plants was gained from the Indians. As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the woman's functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the system, bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

A PICTURE ROMANCE.

The Frame That Startled Delacroix in the Paris Salon.

Eugene Delacroix, founder of the French romantic school of art, was very poor in his youth. His first picture of note was his "Dante and Virgil," painted when he was only twenty years old. It was extremely large, containing several figures the size of life, and to buy the canvas and colors took all the money Delacroix had. A frame was out of the question, but a good natured carpenter gave the young artist four strips of lath, of which Delacroix made a rude framework for his masterpiece, which he then sent to the salon. But he had hardly a hope that his picture would be accepted.

On opening day Delacroix went to the salon, but failed to find his painting. He was wandering disconsolately about, when he noticed a great crowd before a picture. He drew near. It was his "Dante and Virgil." But it was in a magnificent, richly gilded frame, as fine a product of the picture mounter's art as could be found in Paris. Astonished, he sought Baron Gros, head of the examining committee. As soon as young Delacroix introduced himself Gros seized his hand and congratulated him with true Gallic enthusiasm. "But," stammered Delacroix, "how about that splendid frame? I had no money to frame it, and—"

"Make your mind easy," said the baron. "Your lath frame fell to pieces but the committee was determined that such a chef-d'oeuvre as you have painted should be placed on exhibition, and we framed your 'Dante' at our own expense."—Exchange.

HISSING AND ENCORES.

Origin of These Two Customs of the Playhouse.

Hissing in playhouses had its origin in Paris in 1680 on the occasion of the presentation of Fontenelle's tragedy, "Aspar." Prior to that time sufficient audiences were wont to yawn audibly and fall asleep when the apathy of the actors and performances justified the course. But on this occasion the magnificent, driven to desperation by the platitudes of Aspar, voiced the anger by hisses, which drove the actors into temporary retirement, according to the testimony of the poet R. who alludes to the incident in his "Brevet de la Calotte." Hissing thereafter became fashionable.

The first encore noted in the annals of the stage was accorded to Livius Andronicus, a Roman actor. He was popular with the masses and was called back so often to repeat his speeches that he in self defense brought a boy to declaim for him while he himself applied the gestures. Whence encores became the rage in subsequent ages. It is known that Andronicus' plan of having an understudy before him before the audience to share his honors has not generally been adopted by Thespians.—Show World.

A lazy liver leads to chronic dyspepsia and constipation—weakens the whole system. Doan's Regulax (25 cents per box) corrects the liver, tone the stomach, cure constipation.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

A Theory That It Will Come by Fire Caused by Friction.

As to the length of time the earth is likely to last, the calculations are that it will not cease to be active for a good many millions of years, such activity not, however, necessarily supposing that life as we know it now will always be possible, the eventuality of a universal ice age being always a contingency that may occur again in the history of the globe.

It is interesting to note that in this connection a Swedish mystic called Stromberg has declared that the world would never know another ice age, but that it was now running out its course to the end. Its existence, he declared, would endure as long as fire burned in the earth's bowels—that is, until the whole mass shall have become solidified. The internal fires, he said, provided the link which maintained the earth in the sun's sphere of attraction. When this attraction shall fail, the earth, according to the Swede, will cease to revolve and will fall away only to disappear by fire caused by friction, thus verifying the Biblical prophecy. As, however, the process of cooling down entirely will take some billions of years, the nervous person will note that there is really no immediate cause for alarm.—New York World.

Pepsin, Saliva and Gastric Juice.

Pepsin, the principal agent in the digestion of food, is a powerful solvent stored up in the walls of the stomach and only poured forth when its assistance is needed. When pure, this fluid is perfectly neutral, neither acid nor alkaline, and appears to be unable to exert any action without the presence of an acid. Such acid is supplied in the gastric juice, secreted by the gastric follicles covering the coating of the stomach. The saliva is merely for the purpose of moistening the food, thus preparing it for the action of the pepsin and gastric fluids.—New York American.

STRAIN TOO GREAT.

Hundreds of Bedford Readers Find Daily Toil a Burden.

The hustle and worry of business men. The hard work and stooping of workmen.

The woman's household cares, Are too great a strain on the kidneys.

Backache, headache, sideache, Kidney troubles, urinary troubles follow.

A Bedford citizen tells you how to cure them all. Mrs. Luther Naus, living on E. Pitt St., Bedford, Pa., says: "Mr. Naus is forced to do a great deal of bending in his work and I think this was the cause of his kidney complaint. For some time he was troubled with a pain in his back and a soreness across his kidneys. The kidneys themselves were not acting properly and he suffered severely from dizzy spells and headaches. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Irvine's Drug Store, and he had only used them a short time when he felt much better in every way. His strength has returned and the pains in his back have disappeared. He is very thankful for the benefits derived."

HOLES IN GLASS.

They Are Too Tiny to See, but Air Can Work Through Them.

Ordinary tumblers will hold water because the globules of water are too big to squeeze through the glass. But glass is as full of holes as a sponge, and air blows right through it because the specks of air are smaller than the holes.

Put a bell into a big globe of glass, seal up the vessel, pump out all the air, then ring the bell inside, and you hear nothing. There is not air enough in the globe to carry a sound. But lay the globe aside for a month or so, and no matter how carefully you have sealed up the neck, you will find that you then can hear the bell when you ring it. Air has got into that globe. Enough anyway to carry a sound has leaked in through the substance of the glass.

The ordinary incandescent lamp is a glass globe with the air pumped out, and after a few months sufficient air leaks through to dim the light which comes from the thread of electrified charcoal inside.

We can make plenty of vessels to hold water, but nothing has been made which will hold air without any leakage. The air sneaks in through holes, which are too small for the human mind to imagine.

In fact, everything leaks.—London Answers.

When Trifles Become Troubles.

If any person suspects that their kidneys are deranged they should take Foley's Kidney Remedy at once and not risk having Bright's disease or diabetes. Delay gives the disease a stronger foothold and you should not delay taking Foley's Kidney Remedy. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Bulls.

COOLNESS IN BATTLE.

Bismarck's Test of Von Moltke at Koniggratz.

Then he came to speak of the battle of Koniggratz and especially of that "anxious moment" in it before the arrival of the crown prince in the rear of the Austrians, when some Prussian attacks had failed and there were signs of disorder among the repulsed troops.

"It was an anxious moment," said Bismarck, "a moment on the decision of which the fate of the empire depended. I confess I felt not a little nervous. I looked at Moltke, who sat quietly on his horse and did not seem to be disturbed by what was going on around us. I thought I would test whether he was really as calm as he appeared. I rode up to him and asked him whether I might offer him a cigar. Since I noticed he was not smoking, I replied that he would be glad if I had one to spare. I presented to him my open case, in which there were only two cigars, one a very good Havana and the other of rather poor quality. Moltke looked at them and even handled them with great attention in order to ascertain their relative value and then with slow deliberation chose the Havana. 'Very good,' he said composedly. This reassured me very much. I thought if Moltke can bestow so much time and attention upon the choice between two cigars things can not be very bad. Indeed, a few minutes later we heard the crown prince's guns, we observed unsteady and confused movements on the Austrian positions, and the battle was won."—Carl Schurz in McClure's.

WON THE VERDICT.

The Jury Did Its Best to Make Good Uncle Sam's Word.

General Tom Edgar, the first white child born on Galveston Island (his birthday was in June, 1837), once narrated his experience as a juror in the case of a negro on trial for stealing a mule. It was in 1855, while United States soldiers were still in charge at Galveston. The negro pleaded not guilty, but the testimony was pretty clear against him. His lawyer, ignoring the testimony, based his defense upon the assertion that the negro could not possibly be guilty. "Is it not a fact," he said, "that the federal government promised to every freed man two mules and sixty acres of land? No man can deny it, because it is a fact. My client has not received his promised sixty acres of land. He has not received his promised span of mules. He has indeed got but one mule, as these witnesses have testified, and the United States still owes him another mule and sixty acres of land. I leave it to you, gentlemen," he said, turning to the jury, "if the facts do not prove conclusively that my client is not guilty of stealing this mule and cannot under the circumstances have been guilty."

"That argument," said General Edgar, "tickled us so that we actually returned a verdict of not guilty. I don't believe the darky ever did get the other mule and the sixty acres, but we did all we could to make Uncle Sam's word good."—Success Magazine.

The Chimney.

Where wood is much used as a fuel, according to Suburban Life, considerable soot collects in the chimneys, and it is a source of many fires. The chimney should be burned out once a year at least and the work done on a damp day, or it may be swept out. A chimney is burned out by placing a bundle of straw or similar material in the bottom of the flue and firing it. To sweep out a chimney a small metal ball about four inches in diameter is hung on a thin rope and pulled up and down in the chimney until it is clean. When not too high, the chimney can be cleaned by a brush on a jointed pole.

Lucky Future Generations.

There is a saying of Carlyle that the greatest hope of our world lies in the certainty of heroes being born into it. That is indeed a glorious certainty, but the reference might be enlarged. Birth itself, we venture to say, not of heroes only, but of the generations in their succession, is the infinitely hopeful thing. It is the guarantee that the world will never grow old; that it will never stand still; that no part is to be called in its eternal progress.—Christian World.

"The Philadelphia Record" Actively Supports Bryan curate information of all the important moves on the campaign chess-board will be indispensable to every wide-awake voter.

Democrats turn naturally to "The Philadelphia Record" for such information. It is the only Democratic newspaper in Philadelphia recognized the country over as one of the leading exponents of Democratic opinion on this edge of the Continent. It is fair, though partisan; it chronicles the telling blow, no matter who is hit. Suppression and misrepresentation are weapons that have no place in its armory. "Square deal" Democrats and Republicans will find the daily budget of "The Record" essential to an intelligent understanding of the progress of a lively Presidential canvass.

No newspaper ever achieved popularity on the strength of its political attitude alone. "The Philadelphia Record" is no exception to the rule. It is lifted above the common level by many distinctive features that appeal to the varied interests of every member of the household. It prints the news—in the news—in a concise, brisk form that has come to be known, even among its contemporaries, as "Record style." A proper sense of perspective dictates its thorough presentation of happenings in its own immediate field—Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland. Its editorial treatment of the questions of the day is at once well-balanced and aggressive. "The Philadelphia Record" exploits no party or political bias, but it is pre-eminent in its special departments. It is the recognized authority in the field of sports and the turf. Farmers and shippers swear by its market reports, which are always complete, accurate and wholly reliable. To the practical man its columns of popularized science are entertaining and helpful; the practical woman finds the matters that lie nearest to her heart treated amply and sensitively in a department devoted to the home, dress and the world of feminine achievement. There is a corner in "The Record" for boys and girls; a weekly column of condensed, up-to-date information for the farmer; a daily banquet of breezy anecdotes—"The Reporter's Nosegay"—so good that they are clipped and reprinted by newspaper editors throughout the country. If you want a clear newspaper, worthy to occupy an honored place in the home circle—

If you want a live newspaper without a streak of yellow in its make-up— If you want a "square" Democratic newspaper that will keep you thoroughly posted on every phase of a stirring national campaign— If you want a family newspaper the profit and pleasure of reading which will be shared by others, no matter how diverse their tastes and inclinations— You want "The Philadelphia Record." It is the only paper that fills the bill.

BRYAN'S CHANCES

The chances of William J. Bryan's being elected President of the United States are good, very good. It is now admitted even by Republican papers that he is much stronger than ever he was before when before the people. The people of the country have found out that he is not the kind of man he was maliciously pictured to be by spell-binders and the press. They now know his character and his ability and they are flocking to him in such numbers as to be more than alarming to his opponent. He is cheered to the echo whenever he appears in public, and some of those now loudest in his praise were against him and worked against him in his former campaigns.

The Pittsburg Gazette-Times, whose loyalty to Republicanism has never been questioned, in a recent editorial had this to say:

Now that Maine has had her say, and has returned a smaller Republican plurality than at any similar time in a quarter of a century, we shall hear that it points the finger of fate at all Republican hopes. Maybe! What it does point to is this, that if the Republican party hopes to win the campaign for the Presidency it will be necessary to enlist every man and every dollar possible in the fight, and not to stop fighting until the polls close on November 3.

Mr. Bryan stands upon a platform adopted by his party, which platform he has no cause to revise. Mr. Taft has, in his speeches, revised the guess-work platform but with his verbal supplements it still fails to meet the demands of the nation. The Republicans are hampered by the record of "Uncle Joe" Cannon, who, entrenched in his Czar-like position as Speaker of the House, is more dangerous than any other one man in the nation. He has blocked needed legislation and has passed bills against the interests of the great mass of the people of the nation—in short he is for the trusts which have been increasing throughout the Roosevelt reign.

THOSE NEW ENGLAND ELECTIONS

The election of state officers in Vermont and Maine are anxiously awaited during Presidential years as they are regarded by many as an index to the outcome of the Presidential election. Many Republican papers made much of the recent election in Vermont in which the Republican candidate for Governor had a plurality of 29,376 over the Democratic candidate. They pointed to the fact that in 1884 and 1892 the Republican majority was reduced to below 25,000 and in those years the Democrats succeeded in electing their Presidential candidate.

In Vermont in 1888 the Republican plurality was 28,404; in 1892, 21,667; in 1896, 40,490; in 1900, 29,718, and in 1904, 30,682. If these figures show anything at all it is by no means a bright picture for the Republicans for the plurality has decreased from 40,490 in 1896, when Mr. Bryan was the choice of his party the first time, to 29,376 at the recent election, a decrease of 11,124 in a state which polled but 63,844 votes in 1896 and 66,747 votes at the recent election. The Republican plurality is 19 per cent. of the total vote less than in 1896. These figures do tell a story and point to a mark, while the selecting of an arbitrary 25,000 as the mark above which if the state goes Republican at the state election, the Republicans are expected to win at the coming Presidential election is nonsense.

But another of those rock-ribbed New England states held an election this week. Maine, the state of Blaine, and Reed, and Dingley, held an election this week and the Republican plurality was reduced to less than 8,000, the smallest at a Presidential election in a quarter of a century. In 1896 when Mr. Bryan was a candidate for the office to which he now aspires the Republican plurality was 45,771. What a fall! A reduction of almost 39,000!

The Republican journals that made so much of the Vermont election a couple weeks ago, when it really gave them no encouragement, are now claiming that the big reduction in Maine was due to local causes. They sent orators galore into these states to keep up the majorities so that the results might be used in the present National campaign—but without avail.

If these state elections are a political barometer our Republican brethren may certainly expect cloudy weather in November.

GOMPERS' STAND INDOUBTED

Executive Council of the A. F. of L. Agrees to Support Him.

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor has unanimously indorsed Samuel Gompers in his opposition to the Republican national ticket. It has been intimated that there would be a split among the members of the committee, but President Gompers explained matters to the full satisfaction of all his fellow committeemen. The meeting of the Council was held in Washington, but the outcome of it has just been announced.

It is also said that money is coming in fast from labor organizations in response to the appeal issued by the Federation. This money is to be used to pay the expenses of labor men who will take the stump for Bryan.

MOLL SENTENCED

Sent to Penitentiary for 2½ Years—Miss Hassler Gets One Year.

In the Franklin County court this week D. C. Moll and Florence Hassler, whose conviction of concealing the death of a bastard child was reported in The Gazette last week, was sentenced to serve time in the penitentiary, the former for two and one-half years and the latter for one year.

Upon the jury's finding both defendants guilty last week leave was granted to make motion for a new trial, which motion was made at this week's sessions by Moll's attorney O. C. Bowers. In his argument in favor of his motion he held that Judge Gillan's charge to the jury was mainly responsible for the conviction, that the evidence was insufficient to warrant conviction and that there was no concealment of the body.

In his argument against the arrest of judgment District Attorney Long claimed that the jury was the tribunal to pass upon the guilt of the parties. Judge Gillan refused to grant a new trial. Moll and Miss Hassler were called but neither answered. Upon being brought before the court by the constable, without comment the sentences were imposed. Both took the sentence stoically.

Reward for Bravery

During a heavy rainstorm on July 21 lightning struck a large tree near Ashcom Station, causing it to fall on the railroad track just before the approach of a heavy freight train moving southward. The efforts of Frank Lucas of Dobbin, W. Va., who was fishing nearby and who waded the river, flagged and stopped the freight before it reached the tree, averted what might have been a serious accident. The railroad company, through Supt. W. L. Cooper of this division, recently rewarded the man to the extent of ten dollars for his prompt action.

Crowell, was united in marriage to Cloyd M. Eller, also of Hopewell. Rev. J. W. Glover performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and invited guests. The house was beautifully decorated. Morris Reunion

The Morris family held their third annual reunion near Everett on Saturday, September 5. Morris of Rt. 6 Everett; Secretary, A. B. Morris of Rt. 3 Everett; and Treasurer, Oliver S. Morris of Chapman's Run. It was unanimously decided to hold the next annual reunion near Everett the first Saturday in September 1909.

and have been an advocate of the principle ever since. He now admits that the principle is sound. Thus he comes to my position after fourteen years of waiting.

Fourth—I said in 1898 that the Filipinos ought to have their independence. We declared it to be the paramount issue in 1900 and I have ever since insisted upon ultimate independence of the Filipinos and of an immediate declaration of the government's intention. Mr. Taft has this year admitted that the people must ultimately have independence, although he postpones the day of it for at least two generations. I have maintained my position. He has come around to it. I have also discussed the Philippine question in this campaign and called attention to the fact that Mr. Taft made a mistake of $114,000,000 in his estimate of the cost of imperialism. In his notification speech he put the cost at $8,000,000 a year, whereas the increase in the army and navy alone amounts to more than $120,000,000.

The Railroad Question

Fifth—On the railroad question he has expressed himself as strongly as I have. He has said, and the President has also said, that government ownership will follow if the railroads prevent regulation. I have said the same thing. I do not desire government ownership. I hope that the railroads will permit regulation. Our positions only differ in that he has more faith than I have in the willingness of the railroads to be regulated, but we agree that the subject of ownership is one that cannot be determined until effective regulation has been tried, so that ownership is not an issue and I have never sought to make it an issue.

Gave Impetus to Business

He spends some time on the money question. The money question has been taken out of politics because the unexpected discoveries of gold have given the increase which was demanded by the Republican party as well as the Democratic party. Mr. McKinley voted for free coinage when he was in Congress and the Republican platform of 1896 contained a promise of international bimetalism. The elimination of the money question is not due to Republican legislation but to an increase in the discovery of gold which has given an impetus to business throughout the whole world.

Fails to Meet Issues

Mr. Taft cannot escape from the issues. Will he define his position on the tariff question, on the labor question, on the trust question and on the other issues that are presented in this campaign? He will not be permitted to run away from them. He has accepted the nomination of his party; now let him take the people into his confidence and interpret his platform so that the public will know where he stands and what he intends to do.

If he prefers to delve into the past, rather than meet the issues of the present, will he explain the Benguet railroad in the Philippines and the perpetual franchises that he wanted to fasten upon the Filipinos with a perpetual guarantee of income to the corporations securing the franchises? Will he explain his record on the labor question and his silence on the tariff question and the trust question, during his official service at Washington?

Thirty-five thousand people in boss-ridden Philadelphia turned out to hear Mr. Bryan discuss the issues of the campaign.

The interest in Mr. Bryan and his doctrines manifested by the large crowds that greeted him at every point at which he spoke on his Eastern trip is indeed significant, and points to an increased vote for him in the states visited. It is firmly believed that he will carry both Maryland and West Virginia, and the enormous majorities in Pennsylvania will be materially reduced.

Natalie of the Neighborhood House.

By CECILY ALLEN

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press

Neighborhood House was Natalie's charity by inheritance. Her mother had founded it and had met the deficiencies in its exchequer from time to time. Natalie was not sentimental, but her mother's pathetic anxiety about Neighborhood House during her last illness had touched the girl, whose life had been devoted to the pursuit of pleasure.

Why Natalie should turn to the Neighborhood House in her hour of hurt pride only Providence could explain. To her the working girls toward whose comfort, education and pleasure her cheeks had contributed might as well have been in Persia or China, so little did she know them. In a vague sort of way she thought of them as moles who came out of their holes at night and blinking, even dully, enjoyed such pleasure as women of her kind provided for them.

So when she came upon Maggie Connolly face downward in the pillow of a cozy corner on that hot June Saturday, when all the rest of the Neighborhood girls had gone picnicking, she stood looking down upon the tearful one with strange, brooding eyes.

"My dear girl," she began, with that gentle air of patronage which is the refined cruelty of the rich toward the sensitive souls among the poor, "what has happened? Have you hurt yourself? Have you lost your purse?" Maggie was nothing if not democratic. She did not ask Miss Natalie Burgess who she was or what she was doing there.

"Tom Devery's gone to the beach with that bleach blond at the next machine, Polly Maguire. Get that, will you?"

"But you must know lots of other young men who would be glad to take you to the beach. I saw them hanging on the cars like flies."

Maggie, who had wiped her eyes, now turned her scornful gaze upon her would be comforter.

"I don't want to go with those fellows. I want just Tom."

The sudden break in her voice, the sudden gathering of mist over her blue eyes, brought revelation to the gettied daughter of millions.

"I want just Tom."

It was like an echo from the night before.

Not that she had put it into words. Not that she had so much as admitted to herself that she wanted to see one Thomas Witherspoon Brainard. But suddenly, like a flash of lightning across a dark landscape, she saw the panorama of her own heart.

She wanted Tom, the other tall, clean cut Tom, and she had always wanted him.

"What came between you and—Tom?" she asked.

"What came between us? What comes between every girl like me and what she wants—trouble. Working overtime till I'm that red-eyed, can't cross your fingers at me, and the two children sick at home, and mother talking all I earn. I know she can't help that and me so she is in clothes so a man would want to take me to the beach, and Tom is that particular. And Polly Maguire—she can spend all her wages on herself. She's got a new organdie that you can see through to the pink silk slip. Oh—"

"But if she's wearing that to the beach she is dressed in very poor taste," said Natalie severely. "And a man who will forget you because your clothes are shabby is really not worth fretting for."

Maggie sat up very straight.

"What do you know about wanting clothes? I bet you've got a dress for every day in the year, and when he comes you have an awful time thinking which one he'd like best, 'cause you've got so many. But when you haven't one good dress to your name and things go wrong at the factory—and, well, I said a few things and he said some, and he threw me down."

For a few moments Natalie Burgess sat quietly stroking the head of her newly acquired acquaintance and who had once more retired to the questionable comfort of the cushion. Then very gently she said:

"Don't cry any more, Maggie. I guess being thrown down is something most women have to bear some time in their lives. It was not a question of dress with me, and I am quite sure I had said nothing. We never had a word. He just left town and never even said goodby."

Maggie stared at her, speechless with wonder. Her own troubles were forgotten. Some man had "thrown down" this radiant creature in soft gray silk and shimmery plumes!

"We are going to my house, Maggie, and find a dress for you that will quite outshine Polly's organdie, because it will be much more appropriate, and then we are going to the picnic, and you are going to mingle with the young people as if Tom Devery did not exist, and when he comes to make up with you, as he surely will, you are going to meet him halfway. Do you understand?"

Talk about Cinderella and the ball! Her experiences were as nothing when compared to Maggie Connolly's trip that afternoon. The wonderful rows of clothes—presses which open when Miss Burgess' maid touched a button, the many linen frocks from which it was hard to select just the trimmest one for Maggie, and then the selection of shoes and hats and gloves, for the two girls were nearly of one size.

And at last the spin to the bench in Miss Burgess' car, the routing of Polly Maguire and the recapture of Tom Devery! In her excitement Maggie almost forgot her benefactress.

But Natalie did not forget Maggie and traced her through the Neighborhood House to her home.

Maggie's Tom had come back, and Maggie loved the whole world! So when Miss Burgess questioned her about working girls and their privations Maggie glowed and dilated on the good the Neighborhood House had done them all.

From the Neighborhood House and its privileges it was a short step to the need of a vacation hotel for girls, and almost before Maggie knew what happened she and Tom, now her abject slave, were whirled away one Saturday in Miss Burgess' machine to look over a neglected hotel estate in a once fashionable seaside colony.

Natalie Burgess knew the value of her money, and she also knew the value of a shrewd assistant like Maggie, who understood girls and their problems. So it happened that the Neighborhood House opened a summer annex at West Shore, and Maggie Connolly resigned her post at the factory to become Natalie's representative in the new establishment.

"Natalie of the Neighborhood House," her friends called her now and laughed at her caprice. And at the summer annex of the Neighborhood House Thomas Witherspoon Brainard found her one lovely fall day, shortly after his return from Vienna, where he had gone abruptly to complete his medical studies.

The idea of Natalie, the self centered, hobnobbing with factory girls rather tickled his fancy.

Maggie was packing the summer fittings. Natalie was sitting in an open window, swinging her trim feet and laughing at Maggie's enthusiasm. But she had been helping, too, and her sleeves were rolled up, her eyes bright, her cheeks flushed, as she turned to meet Brainard.

Feminine intuition told Maggie that this was the psychological moment for her to pack up what few groceries were left in the storeroom. What happened during her absence is not necessary to set forth here, but as she slipped back to remind her patron that twilight was falling and the car was waiting to take them back to town she heard Thomas Witherspoon Brainard say contritely:

"Can you ever forgive me for imagining that you were a vain, selfish, useless sort of doll that could never understand or help a struggling physician? I don't deserve you, dearest. I was a thick headed fool!"

Maggie went out on the porch and sank upon the top step.

"Does the man live who throws you down that can't be won back?" she asked herself happily, for how could Maggie know that the glorious Natalie had won happiness through her humble self?

Still Searching.

He was young and delfonair and was seen about the water front looking for an old sailor, says the Philadelphia Ledger. "Any old sailor will do," he remarked confidentially to a big man, to whom he stated the object of his quest, "because all I want is to have some tattoo marks taken out of my arms."

When the tug man informed him that these india ink punctures would stick closer to him than a blood relation, and would be on his arm when his death certificate was filed the young fellow was abashed.

"What in the world am I going to do?" he asked in despair. "There's a heart and two arrows and a girl's initials on my arm, and I want to get them off. I've got to get rid of these letters any way. The girl ran away last week with another fellow, and they're enjoying their honeymoon now. I must get another girl, and I don't want to sleep with a married woman's monogram just above my elbow."

The case was truly a pitiable one, and the generous heart of the tug man was touched.

"I'll tell you what you've got to do," he exclaimed as a happy thought struck him. "You must find another girl to fit those initials."

When last seen the tattooed man was in search of a damsel who could answer to the initials "M. A. J."

LETTERS OF GOLD.

WHEN you see aught that is good in a friend,
Write it in letters of gold;
Something or other your heart can commend
As on your journey you daily may wend.
That the dear import remain to the end,
Write it in letters of gold.

Write the glad greetings as onward you fare,
Write it in letters of gold.
Publish it wide on the mountains so bare,
Over old fields of the thorn and the tare,
"Ye cannot wander outside of my care,"
Write it in letters of gold.

There is the message to one gone astray.
Write it in letters of gold.
Tender is mercy, enduring for aye,
Guiding the others who might lose the way,
Treasure the meaning for yourself and stay,
Write it in letters of gold.

THE WAKING YEAR.

A LADY red upon the hill
Her annual secret keeps.
A lady white within the field
In placid lily sleeps.

THE tidy breezes with their brooms
Sweep vale and hill and tree.
Prithee, my pretty housewives,
Who may expected be?

THE neighbors do not yet suspect.
The woods exchange a smile—
Orchard and buttercup and bird—
In such a little while.

AND yet how still the landscape stands,
How nonchalant the wood,
As if the resurrection
Were nothing very odd!

—Emily Dickinson.

THE CLOVER.

SOME sing of the lily and daisy and rose
And the pansies and pinks that the summer time throws
In the green, grassy lap of the meadow that lays Blinkin' up at the skies through the sun-shiny days.

But what is the lily and all of the rest
Of the flowers to a man with a heart in his breast
That was dipped brimmin' full of the honey and dew
Of the sweet clover blossoms his babyhood knew?

I never set eye on a clover field now
Er foot round a stable er climb in the mow
But my childhood comes back just as clear and as plain
As the smell of the clover I'm sniffin' again.

And I wander away in a barefooted dream
Where I tangle my toes in the blossoms that gleam
With the dew of the dawn of the morning of love
Ere it wept o'er the graves that I'm weeping above.

And so I love clover—it seems like a part
Of the saddest sorrows and joys of my heart,
And wherever it blossoms, oh, there let me bow
And thank the good God as I'm thanking him now.

And I pray to him still for the strength when I die
To go out in the clover and tell it good-bye.
And lovingly nestle my face in its bloom
While my soul slips away on a breath of perfume.

—James Whitecomb Riley.

Today's Suggestion by Ellen Stan.

It is necessary to have a good supply of comfortable dresses made of good wearing materials for summer wear. The design illustrated is desirable to copy, as it has separate bloomers made of the same materials as the dress. These bloomers are much more comfortable than petticoats and allow perfect freedom of movement and at the same time save much in laundry and sewing.

Galatea, gingham, percale and chambray are serviceable materials in which it may be copied, while no trimming is required other than the collar, cuffs and belt of a pretty, contrasting goods. A plain blue gingham would be pretty with collar and cuffs of white pique. These should be made so they can be removed and changed to fresh ones, as this is the part of a frock that is sure to become soiled first.

Pretty little checks are very effective for dresses such as this, and a novel idea is to cut them on the cross grain of the goods. Plaids in dark colors are sometimes very pleasing and are much more serviceable than light colors. Such a frock seen recently was of dark and light blues trimmed with a plain blue. The collar and cuffs would be attractive buttonhole scalloped with self colored cotton or finished with all over embroidery.

Many of the sheer materials this season come with printed or woven borders of a pretty, contrasting color. These make up prettily and are economical, as no other trimming is required. A white lawn with a polka dotted border of pink would be attractive made after this design, as the border could be used to form the bottom of the skirt and also for the collar and cuffs. Worn with a pretty silk tie to match the pink of the border, it would be dainty enough for afternoon or school wear.

The pattern for this dress is cut in five sizes—for girls from two to ten years of age. To copy it for a girl eight years of age it requires 6 1/4 yards of material 27 inches wide or 5 yards 36 inches wide.

Any reader of this paper who desires to secure this pattern may do so by sending 10 cents to this office. Give the number, 4224, state size desired and write the full address plainly. The pattern will be forwarded promptly by mail.

CLEVELAND AND GRANT.

Sweet are the uses of adversity. It may not seem so sometimes. To him who is exorcised thereby the chastening may be not pleasant, but grievous, yet "it works out a far more exceeding weight of glory."

Which is proved again in the career of Grover Cleveland and by the career of every great man.

No one has ever trod the higher planes of life except he has come up to his place by a way that sometimes was dark and stormy.

There was a time in the life of Grover Cleveland when he had to decide between the demands of his party and the demands of his conscience—on the one hand the tumult and the shouting of the captains, on the other the whispering of the inward monitor. And, treading the wine press alone, he shut his ears to the shoutings and listened to the still, small voice.

Grover Cleveland had his failings, but he will always stand in the recollection of his countrymen a superb figure of moral courage.

He faced detraction and slander. Some of it he lived down. Some of his detractors he won over. There are those who believed to the day of his death that going into office poor he came out a millionaire. It remained for the probate court—when this stubborn patriot was in his grave—to show the world that he was not a rich man. Adversity made him great.

His efforts to do the right and his bravery to suffer wrong shaped him into the full measure of real greatness. It was so with General Grant.

It was dark for him when the commandant of that lonely post on the Pacific coast gave Grant notice that he must reform his drinking habits or resign.

And Grant did both! Vicksburg was not the first great victory for Grant. Down on that little forest farm near St. Louis he laid siege to his fell lust for liquor and conquered it.

Like Cleveland, he was greatly abused by his fellows. To this day there are many who believe he was a drunkard.

Nor was Appomattox his latest victory. It was when he was old and broken in fortune, mortally stricken by disease, fighting death with broken sword, he rose to the full height of real greatness and sent to all his countrymen his loving exhortation: "Let us have peace!"

Cleveland and Grant are far beyond the reach of partisan rancor and censure of the multitude, their grand figures lit up by the pure sunshine of merited fame.

Adversity made them great.

THE HOT WEATHER FACE.

Yes, the weather is warm. Read the face, writ large, on the hot weather faces about you.

See the scowls? Look at the faces.

Beads of perspiration are on them. The faces tell a story of sticky clothes and burning feet. The air is murky, and the faces frown. Brows are corrugated. Mouths droop at the edges. Eyes are sullenly glazed. Gestures of dissent and protest. Frowns. Scowls. Look at the faces.

These are the faces you frequently see. But they are distorted. They repel you. You dare scarcely smile into them, though ever so feebly. Thunder clouds, ready to burst in anger, sit on the common brows.

And so, though you may try to look pleasant with the angry, fussy bunch of humans about you, before you are aware, so much are we all of kin, your own temperature goes up a notch or two.

But wait.

There's a face that is different. It is the face of a woman—a rare woman. She is hot, like you, like the others. Undeniably her face is somewhat red. But her brow is placid. Her eyes have a laugh in them. And her face is smiling! It is the smile that will not come off. What a relief to look at the pleasant face and note the cheerful manner. You forget your troubles, and your temperature drops just a little.

What a handsome face! And how ugly the faces of the others by comparison! The other women are better dressed than she, some of them, but they spoil all their beauty by the insistent frown that carries. And the more grouchy the hotter they become—and the uglier.

There's another face—a man's face. Good humor radiates from every vantage point. Jollity is bodied forth from scalp lock to double chin. He perspires, but smiles. He mops his face, but his eyes are saying, "It's always warm in summer." He appears to be a little cooler than the others. He really is cooler.

How is that?

Why, there's physical heat and mental heat. That is to say, you are warm. You say to yourself, "I'm hot." You go on believing you are hot and saying, "My, but it's hot!" The result is—and this is entirely scientific—your pile mental heat on the top of physical heat. You are hot in body. You also get hot in mind. That is a bad combination, because the mental heat is more dangerous than the physical.

The best way to save yourself the heat is to forget it. Smile and cool off.

And, whatever you do, if you must put on a hot weather face, keep it to yourself. Don't put it into circulation.

PLAIN WORDS TO A YOUNG MAN.

Young fellow!

The girl who works at your side—If you don't watch out—will forge ahead of you.

Honest, now—

Girls are steadier, as a rule, than boys. They are more dependable. They do their work in better form. They are prompt and neat. They can be trusted. They do not loaf. They are conscientious. They are accommodating. They are pleasant in their ways.

The girls do not smoke. They do not drink. They do not gamble.

In plain words, the moral character of girls, partly because society holds them to a severe standard, is higher than that of boys, as a rule. Is it not so?

Many a young man thinks character is an unimportant factor in business. Don't you make that error.

You cannot, must not, indulge bad habits, blow in your money, keep late hours, dissipate and then fancy that because you show up on time in the morning you will be none the worse for it.

In the long run you will lose out.

You may be perfectly honest. You may scorn to fitch a cent of money from your employer. But you are so made that you cannot lose moral fiber and succeed. You are built that way.

All about you are the wrecks of men who shake their fists at society and say they have not had a fair show. Most of them have failed simply because they have lacked MORAL BACKBONE.

Remember, it is not simply "nice" to behave yourself. It is absolutely necessary.

Most failures in business are MORAL FAILURES.

Another thing, young man:

Note how many more girls than boys are in the high school graduating classes.

What does that signify?

It means that women are to be the cultured classes in the future. The boys stop in the grades and go out to make money. The girls stay in school and educate themselves. They do not stop there. Some go to colleges. Some join clubs and continue their studies.

Now—

You suppose the cultured woman of the future can be dominated by a husband less cultured? In some cases, maybe, but—

Unless present day tendencies of education are changed trouble lies ahead—for the men.

Oh, I know that well educated girl of yours will think little of this matter when you are first married, and you may think nothing of it, but the time may come when you will be notorious unfitted for each other. That way may lie domestic trouble and divorce.

Get a hump on yourself, young man.

Or the girl will distance you.

SHAME ON YOU!

"Nobody wants me. My father has gone away long ago, and mother left me in the street the other day. Mother, she wants to go back to Europe."

Thus said Willie Peterson, cripple.

Taking a hitch in the leather strap which bound some clumsy braces to his poor misshapen limbs, the boy, twelve years old, told his story to the secretary of the Humane society at New York.

Man, woman, boy, girl, if you have troubles of your own, read the story.

Crippled by ignorance, nearly starved, deserted by his parents, turned adrift in the streets, the lad was as lively and chipper as a morning robin.

Willie Peterson fell out of bed when he was a baby, injuring his legs. Improperly attended, he was made a life cripple. And this is how he faced his fate.

"I can walk all right," he said, taking hold of the braces with which he has learned to hold himself up. "It hurts some, but it doesn't keep me from walking. I can get upstairs. BUT I HAVE TO WALK ON MY HANDS AND KNEES THEN."

Poor battered midget!

And YOU. You can go upstairs in three bounds, yet you whine to yourself about your petty handicaps and sniffle over your troubles.

Does not the brave and cheery spirit of this maimed, half starved, deserted, but dauntless cripple shame you into decency? In the face of his fortitude either keep still or pay the penalty of losing your self respect.

Who are you, woe and healthful, that you should vex the Providence of Willie Peterson with cowardly cries?

You may be amazed and shocked at the revelation of selfishness and callousness in the heart of his perverted mother. How could she bring herself to abandon a brave little son like Willie Peterson, a son crippled and half orphaned? His pitiful lameness ought to have made him all the dearer to the mother heart.

And—

You may wonder and speculate and be unable to explain by what mysterious way the strong and lovely flower of fortune ever could have grown in the poor soil of degeneracy.

But—there's the boy.

And you are stung into shame of yourself by the soul of this dauntless youngster of the city streets.

HIS SACRIFICE.

At the town of Paris, Ill., Lawrence Friend, a railroad brakeman, died to save his fellow men.

It was this way:

A heavily loaded passenger train was approaching at high speed. The freight train on which the brakeman was employed stood on the track. The engineer of the passenger train did not know that. In a flash Lawrence Friend saw his duty. It might mean death to him. Nevertheless he threw the switch. The train went on to the siding and was saved.

But the brave brakeman was caught in the wheels and ground to death.

Somebody had "undered."

It may have been the train dispatcher who made the mistake or an engineer or a conductor. However that may be, when the man was wanted at his post to die he was there.

He gave to the supreme moment all he had—his life.

Of course there was an "investigation," which means that the railroad officials charged some employee with neglect or breach of duty and that the employees showed the lack of safety appliances, and so on, after the manner of such hearings.

Lawrence Friend was dead. He had not stopped to argue. His note to question why, his not to make reply, his but to do and die. And on the instant he made the supreme sacrifice.

He died for his fellows.

Men do that every day.

Sometimes we say that men are no longer moved by noble motives. We say the age is commercialized. We say men will do nothing except they be paid in dollars or in position.

It is not true.

Especially is it untrue of the great host of railroad men who hourly put their lives in jeopardy and whose initial instinct it is to save the lives of those who are given over to their care.

And in the rank and file of our industrial army men are found as brave as any soldier on any battlefield—every day heroes of our common life.

These men often show a supreme courage and a disinterested motive, and their deeds are matters of course, a part of their day's work.

Lawrence Friend had no thought of being called heroic. It was his duty to save the train. He did it as he would do any other duty of the day and took the consequences.

In the olden days acts of heroism were so rare that monuments and shrines were built to mark them. Places of self sacrifice were holy.

All places are holy where man dies to save his fellow man. Measured thus, there is much of holy ground on our American soil.

And so, were there shrines to mark the places of self sacrifice, one would needs be built by the side of that switch at Paris!

The mangled body of Lawrence Friend lying by the side of the track was a holy sacrifice.

BE STRONG AND UNAFRAID.

Fear is your deadliest foe.

Also it is a fgment of your fancy.

And useless.

Physiologists say fear impoverishes the blood, interferes with the assimilation of food, attacks the nerve centers and lowers the physical powers. It makes a man physically unfit.

If so, what must be its effect on the mind?

It lessens one's ability to think, lowers his ambition, weakens his character and affects his happiness. In short, all the forces of personality go in front of fear.

Fear whispers to the young, strong to do and dare, and the strength becomes as water. It assails the middle aged, and the uplifted arm of energy falls inert. It torments the old and robs it of its peace. And yet—

Strong thief as it is, it is an abnormal weakness, for it is the son of ignorance and superstition.

If one knows himself and knows life as it is, there is nothing anywhere to be afraid of. If one knows not himself nor life, fear is unavailing, useless.

To put it plainly, there are two things one should never fear—first, what he can help and, second, what he cannot help.

But, it is asked, how can one who has not natural courage overcome his bondage to fear?

Easily. Every person is in the possession of certain conscious powers. These powers may be concentrated, sharpened, projected into force. These powers are one's physical stock, which may be increased or reduced. If one listens to the suggestions of fear he will smother his faculty. But also—

He may say to himself: "I will be what I want to be, do what I want to do. I am captain on the deck of my own ship. My soul is greater than any fear. Shall I take counsel of my own creation?" If he says these things and acts on these suggestions he will overcome his fear and strengthen his faculty.

Per contra, if he doubts his power or neglects to use it his fear will master him.

Just why this should be so we may not say. It is difficult to explain how the human mind can shape achievement in advance. But it does so. It is a condition and not a theory. We are built that way.

Power somehow creates power. Force makes force. Force faculty that is dormant produces only weakness. Cultivated, it develops further faculty.

So, if you have a fear, trample it under your feet!

Hold up your chin and be unafraid. Look the creature of your own fancy fairly in the face. Defy it. Take it to task. It will flee away.

Where the Czars Are Buried.

The remains of all the czars of Russia since Peter the Great lie in a memorial chapel built on one of the islands of the Neva. All the cenotaphs are exactly alike, each being a block of white marble without any decoration whatever. The only distinction which one is marked is the name of the deceased emperor.

MADE IN HEAVEN.

By T. BLAIR EATON.

The bishop had just landed a blue-fish. It was a big fish, and before it was finally hauled into the cockpit of the Sally B. it had displayed undoubted qualities of gameness that had warmed the cockles of the bishop's heart.

Therefore, as Jim Crocker, who always took the bishop out when he fished in Sepennesett bay, flattened down the sheet and headed the little catboat for the rips once more there was a scraggly smile on the bishop's intellectual face.

He stood with one foot on the seat, paying out his line astern, his eyes taking in delightedly the sparkle and flash of the water and the little white clouds creeping up above the horizon.

Those clouds whispered of a smart breeze later on, and with the wind freshened a bit it would be an ideal day for fish. Anon the bishop turned to survey his latest catch, and each time as he did so he gave a little chuckle of satisfaction.

Suddenly there was a mighty tug at the line; astern was a flash of blue and silver as the fish leaped from the water. The bishop took a firmer hold on the line, and his eyes glowed with excitement.

"Ease her up a bit, Jim," he called to the man at the tiller. "Look at the fellow I've hooked this time. He's the father of them all!"

So engrossed was the bishop with his fish that he did not hear the quick panting of a gasoline engine, nor did he see the power boat tearing toward them, sending up twin waves of white spume at its bow.

Just as the second fish—and it was considerably larger than the first—was hauled aboard the Sally B. the coughing exhaust of the engine ceased and the power boat shot alongside.

There were two men in it—a big, athletic young fellow with clean cut features who stood beside the wheel in

"That's the morning boat to the island," he called to the man at the tiller. "Look at the fellow I've hooked this time. He's the father of them all!"

consent. Nothing else, I assure you, would take me from this fishing."

Reluctantly he climbed into the power boat. "I'll be back in two hours, Jim," he called to the boatman. He turned to the young man at the wheel.

"Now, then, my fine fellow, let me see all speed for Dark Island, and while we are getting there suppose you tell me what is at the bottom of all this."

"A lady," said Devereaux simply as the boat went tearing across the bay.

"So I surmised," said the bishop dryly. "Do you mind telling me her name?"

"You probably know her," said the other. "It's Margaret Sterling."

"Yes, I know her," said the bishop. "Now a few details, if you please."

"Of course you know her aunt, Mrs. Bradbury?" said the younger man.

"I do," said the bishop, with a certain plain emphasis.

Young Devereaux pointed to a trail of smoke just above the southern horizon.

"You see that smoke?" he asked. "Well, that's the morning boat to the island. On that boat are Margaret's aunt and Sir William Winterham, with all his titles trailing him. He arrived from England yesterday, and Mrs. Bradbury is bringing him up here to the Crags. The rest is obvious. Mrs. Bradbury's word is law with Margaret, who has lived with her aunt all her life. It's a splendid match from Mrs. Bradbury's point of view."

He paused.

"Go on," the bishop commanded.

"Well, I have different views on the subject," said Devereaux, with a sudden squaring of his broad shoulders that filled the bishop with secret admiration, "and down in her heart I am sure Margaret has too. When Mrs. Bradbury and Sir William, with all his distinctions, land at the steamboat pier, which is just in front of the Crags, I want Mrs. John Henderson Devereaux to be the first to greet them. That is the favor I want to ask of you. You catch my meaning, I trust?"

"Well, bless me!" said the amazed bishop. He sat silent for a time. Then "Bless me!" he said again. "The impudence of you—the astounding impudence!"

He began to chuckle softly.

"Is this boat going at her best speed?" he asked. "We've got to make Dark Island ahead of that steamer. I say we've got to."

The steamer was whistling off the island when the power boat shot up to the pier by the Crags, and the bishop and young Devereaux, scrambling out, hurried up the path to the big house among the pines. As they reached the piazza a radiant girl came forward to meet them. Devereaux, breathless, but with shining eyes, wasted no time in greetings.

"Margaret!" said he, "this is my father's oldest friend, Bishop Carrington. He is here to marry us—at once, before that steamer docks."

"Oh!" said the girl, flushing beautifully. "Oh!"

For the moment she seemed utterly bewildered. Then she turned to the bishop with a smile of comprehension.

"Are you quite ready, bishop?" she asked with quiet pride, taking her place by the young man's side.

"Dearly beloved brethren, we are gathered together here"—began the bishop in sonorous tones, when the steamboat whistled, sounding close to the pier, interrupted him.

"We had best abbreviate," he said hurriedly. "The boat will be in before we can finish the complete service."

Five minutes later the bishop was congratulating the happy pair before him.

"And now," said he, a bit uneasily. "If you'll lend me your power boat and your engineer, John, I think I'll get back to the bay. The fishing is simply wonderful this morning, and—er—besides, I think it would perhaps be prudent under the circumstances for me to meet Mrs. Bradbury a little later."

"I am Bishop Carrington," said the bishop.

"Good," said the other, with much relief. "Bishop, I wish to goodness you'd have spread the news abroad last night that you were down here. It would have saved me no end of worry. As it is, we've time enough yet. I'm going to ask you to do me a favor, if you will—a very great favor. My name is Devereaux—John Henderson Devereaux. I think you knew my father very well."

"Look here," said the bishop, "are you Billy Devereaux's son?"

DR. J. N. HELMAN

Eye-Sight Specialist

of Pittsburg, Pa.,

Will be at the Bedford House, Bedford, Pa.,

THURSDAY and FRIDAY,
September 24 and 25.

Examinations Are Free.

Headaches overcome by our wonderful system. Prices from $2 to $8. All lenses guaranteed for two years. No one urged to buy, and all will be treated courteously whether an order is given or not.

We Do Not Peddle.

Eighteen months ago I began making regular visits to Bedford and during that time have fitted over 500 people in Bedford County. This, in itself, speaks for the character of work done. Remember there is no charge for re-correction until after the expiration of the two years' guarantee, and the prices are reasonable.

$5.00 Glasses

We have a special gold frame which we fit with the lenses you require, subject to our 2 year guarantee, for the above price.

We make a specialty of defects of the eye only, and overcome and correct all troubles, such as headaches, nervousness, cross-eyes, and all conditions caused by eye-strain.

Do You Know

That the use of perfectly-fitted glasses will relieve and overcome headaches, burning eyes, nervousness, black spots and defective vision, and the early use of glasses when we first notice any eye trouble, will in most cases prevent sore eyes, diseases of the eyes and the permanent loss of sight? In almost all cases of the above symptoms the vision is perfect, which leads us to attribute our eye trouble to some other cause.

Would you rather suffer with headaches, nervousness and other conditions caused by eye-strain, than wear glasses? It must be one or the other, for 98 per cent. of headaches, both sick and nervous, come from overtaxation of the eye muscles and the only relief is glasses. Of course, they must be right. Any peddler who comes to your door can sell you a pair of glasses, but not once in a thousand times are they what you require. Besides, those who peddle only come around once, and you rarely see them again; all they want is your money, for they have no reputation to sustain. On the other hand, should you get glasses from us you know that you can see about them once every month, if necessary, and, besides, you are not dealing with a perfect stranger as I have been coming here regularly every month for about two years.
